By JANE VOILES
The 1940s leading up to the hundredth anniversary of the discovery of gold are going to be El Dorado County's own decade. We had better recognize our own importance in early California history and do something about it as no one will do it for us.

That up and coming young columnist Herb Caen of the S. F. Chronicle said recently while reporting that Felix Riesenberger, Jr., was in San Francisco gathering material for another book, that books about San Francisco were in demand in New York. As county-conscious El Doradoans some of us justly feel that El Dorado county made San Francisco—a statement which might call forth some pleasant memories from the Golden-gaiters.

To be sure, it is all very well to be county conscious but how many of us know our own history? How many of us know the Museum over at Kelsey and avail ourselves of the privilege of talking to its curator, Miss Margaret Kelly? How many of us know the valuable contributions of the late Charles Elmer Upton and of Will Upton to our county's records? How many own a copy of Herman D. Jerrett's "California's El Dorado, yesterday and today?"

We saw Mr. Jerrett's book listed in the Holmes Book Company catalogue of California for $2.50 and lost no time in getting a copy—one or two more are available. We have seen this same book in a San Francisco bookseller's catalogue listed at $6.00. Aside from its historical value, the book will have a special value as a collector's item. To those not familiar with the book, we say that it describes many of the old El Dorado towns as Indian Diggings, Grizzly Flat, Michigan Flat, Murderer's Bar, Pinch'em Tight, etc., as well as some of the picturesque figures among the stage drivers and some of the early lynchings.

H. R. Knickerbocker, that red-headed young comet from Texas who has been a world reporter in Europe for the last 17 years brings to Californians this month a first hand report of the European War. Mr. Knickerbocker was in France at the time of that country's surrender and believes that it was the mental attitude of that country that sent 2,300,000 of its men as prisoners in Germany. But England's morale is not weakening. Winston Churchill, whom Mr. Knickerbocker regards as the most important factor in the war takes the attitude toward the Germans that "they must be chewed up and spit out."

Mr. Knickerbocker estimates that there have been 25,000 major fires in London, at least that same number of people killed and 35,000 injured. He states that the purpose of the German "blitz" is two-fold: first, to destroy the Royal Air Force in order to make the invasion of Britain possible by the Germans, second, to so terrorize, maim and mutilate the civilian population that they will be made to capitulate.

The speaker's description of the Royal Air Force literally makes your heart beat faster. The boys in the force are all under 25. No one knows the number in the force as that is a military secret. Mr. Knickerbocker visited the airdromes and tells how these boys are making history. Incidentally they are making language too as war always produces a new vocabulary. One of the new flying phrases is "angeling up" which means getting altitude as fast as possible. Of the RAF Winston Churchill says: "Never in the course of human conflict, have so many owed so much to so few." It is the RAF that protects Britain from invasion.

And bringing all of this home to us in the United States, Mr. Knickerbocker says that we are the softest nation in the world and that we had better make up our minds to lose no time to toughen.

Robin Lamson whose books—"Laughing Out of the Ground" and "Death Loses a Pair of Wings"—continue to be read and to have a good, steady sale, seems to be gathering material for a new book. From all we have learned, it is to consist of stories of early California and events which led to the Gold Rush.

In a recent talk Mr. Lamson told some of these stories. Among them was the touching tale of the Russian priest who came to Fort Ross and the more dramatic story of the last battle of the Mexican War in California in which our Charles Weber (of Weber Creek fame and later of Stockton) played a part. When these stories get into a book, they are going to make good reading.

MADRE DE ORO PUTTING IN LARGE MILL

20 Stamp Primary Crusher With Two Ball Units To Have 200-Ton Capacity

Madre De Oro Gold Mines, Inc., operators of the Church, Independence mines in the El Dorado district, have started work on a 200-ton mill and flotation system.

Installation of the mill was heralded in early October when W. J. Loring, managing engineer for the company, whose stockholders include owners of the Alhambra Shumway mine, revealed rich discoveries in the Independence mine, noted over a period of many years for its rich yields in several pocket formations.

The mill will have a twenty-stamp primary crusher with two fifty-ton unit ball mills, along with jigs, classifiers and an oil flotation unit and will constitute a milling unit of more than 200 tons daily capacity.

It is reported that the company has all ready blocked out in the Church mine ore sufficient to pay for the erection of the mill.

The company is stepping up its work as will be noted by the fact that the twelve-man crew operating in October has been increased to thirty men at the present time. It is reported that when the company swings into full operation, the crew will double that number.

Of particular interest to men experienced in mining in the county is the announcement that the company will prefer to employ men resident in the county.

The company is said to have ore blocked out at the present time to insure five years of operation and recent development on the two.

Patrol Warning On Reflectors

Approved Types Cost 50c; Generally, '36 Cars And Younger Are Within Law

SACRAMENTO — The California Highway Patrol today warned motor vehicle owners against the purchase of inferior rear red light reflectors that do not comply with the law.

Chief E. Raymond Cato said the California market is being flooded with inferior reflectors offered for sale in connection with the new section of the Vehicle Code requiring that all motor vehicles be equipped with a type capable of being seen at any distance from 50 to 300 feet under normal atmospheric conditions.

Cato said many of the cheap devices being offered do not meet this requirement, and that any such reflector not specifically approved by the Department of Motor Vehicles is illegal.

Cato said a list of approved reflectors may be examined at any patrol office or official headlight adjusting station. A list of automobiles which have reflectors as part of their original equipment, as far as the patrol can determine, has been prepared, and also has been mailed to the official headlight stations and patrol offices.

In general cars of 1936 model or later have reflectors, and those prior to 1936 do not have. The patrol has not had an opportunity, however, to determine which original equipment reflectors comply with the 300 feet visibility requirement, and as a safety measure is recommending the installation of a separate reflector.

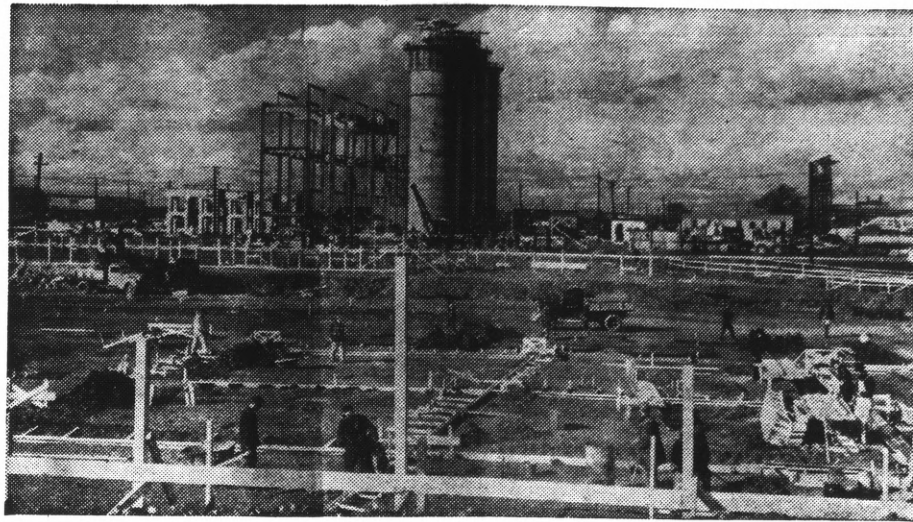

Good reflectors were held to be inexpensive, several of the best being priced as low as fifty cents.

Warble Fly Control Meeting Jan. 22

The Farm Advisor's office is sending out notices of a warble fly control demonstration, to be held Wednesday morning, January 22 at the Auburn Veerkamp ranch, at Missouri Flat at ten o'clock. Notices of the meeting are being sent all known to be interested, it was announced, and if there are any who are interested and who do not receive notices, they are welcome to attend.

Bert Parsons and Ranger M. D. Morris, of the Forest Service, were at Twin Bridges on Friday.

Army Powder Plant Rises from Cornfield

Just last summer this site was a cornfield and tobacco patch, which gives you an idea of how fast the government is working to overcome one of the defense bottlenecks. These buildings, rapidly nearing completion at Charleston, Ind., will form a tremendous powder plant for the army. (Central Press)

GIRLS DRILL TO BOOST COUGARS

High school basketball will make its bow for the season at the Cougar gymnasium at seven o'clock tonight with a flourish supplied by the girls' drill team of the high school—thirty-two strong.

Jackson high school sends its A, B and C quints to Placerville to provide the background for the show which the Cougar girls are prepared to put on under the direction of Miss Saunders, their athletic supervisor.

Doings of the night will start off with the midget casaba capers at seven o'clock and will continue with the Bee team encounter.

Midway in this encounter, or at about 8:30 o'clock, the drill team will take the floor, led by Loreen Boromini. The team is sponsored by the Girls' League and matty red, white and blue uniforms have been prepared for them.

In the drill team are Miss Boromini and Armidia Griggs, Waltha Bidstrup, Cecilia Morton, Laura Pierson, Pearl O'Dare, Ellen Hansen, Virginia Hayes, Lois Evans, Hazel Ench, Alma Linkhart, Dorothy Morgan, Earla Foote, Charlene Franklin, Betty Chaix, Ronardo Cook, Alyce Buhler, May Ann Bryn, Doris Toombs, Mary Passerini, Eleanor Swift, Barbara Long, Beverly Tinker, Ellen Morey, Adele Jespersen, Marilyn Wiley, Joy Coen, Lois Collins, Irene Muir, Verna Browning, Lorene Meyer, Geordena Hansen and Helen Neely.

Following the exhibition, the hoop games will be resumed with the B teams completing their game, and then the A squads will play.

"CALIFORNIA'S NAVY" SAILS ON FOUR-MONTH CRUISE TO LATIN AMERICA AND HAWAII; DUE HOME ABOUT MAY 1st

The California Maritime Academy in which Harlan Hall, county high school graduate and son of Mr. and Mrs. Loren Hall, of Diamond Springs, is a "swab", sailed during the week from its base at Tiburon on a four-month cruise to Latin America and Hawaii.

On its return, the training ship will berth at its new dock at Morro Cove, near Martinez, the Tiburon base being taken over by the United States Navy.

The training cruise, which began Wednesday, will take the ship and its complement of one hundred twenty-five men of the academy south along the coast to Los Angeles, San Diego, Acapulco, Mexico; Balboa, in the Canal Zone, and thence to Callao, Peru.

From this point the cruise continues to Hawaii and Hilo, spending about two weeks in the islands before returning to San Francisco Bay about May 1st.

Harlan is one of fifty first-year men on the cruise and, being first year men, they are termed "swabs."

The California Maritime Academy is officially recognized by the federal government and in view of the national program pointing toward the establishment of a two-ocean Navy, it is felt that the training afforded by the academy may easily prove to be of special value to the men enrolled all of whom, upon graduation, become members of the Naval Reserve.

Cockney "Greek Chorus" Tramps London's East End By Day

At Night They Hunt Bomb Shelters; One Once Served As Freight Warehouse And Now Affords Cover For 3,000 People

EDITORS NOTE: Here is one of a series of dispatches by two United Press foreign correspondents who have just returned from London.

By HARRY FLORY and EDWARD W. BEATTIE, JR.
United Press Staff Correspondents

NEW YORK (UP)—This is the story of London's down-and-outers.

It is the story of a Cockney-born "Greek chorus" that tramps the streets of London in the background of the tragedy set in motion by Marshal Hermann Goering's big bombers.

It is the story of the bombed-out East-Enders who never had much before war came and who haven't anything now except the stubborn will-to-live that is bred in the slums of Limehouse, of Stepney and of Poplar.

If percentages mean much, the down-and-outers aren't a big fragment of Britain's 45,000,000 population. Their numbers aren't important. Just a few thousand among the millions.

As long as the down-and-outers are only a few thousand they are no more important than a few thousand germs in a healthy person's blood stream.

There are two hours of the day when you can see the down-and-outers on the move in London.

One hour to see them is the grey, damp fog of the morning—8 o'clock. At that hour they are shuffling up from the shelter to the Streets and winding down through the smashed streets of the East End to the river Thames.

You can hear them, too, as the muffled swish of their worn boots goes over the cobbled pavements. You can hear the hack-hack-hack of the shelter cough. It is not a nice sound. But it is the only voice of the down-and-outers—so far. A racking voice that warns of congested lungs, bad air, infections and possibly worse to come before the long winter ends.

When Londoners hear that hack-hack-hack their worry over epidemics comes out of the dark corners of their minds where they have hidden it away, trying to forget about it.

The down-and-outers go down to the Thames in the morning to wash in the river. They do that because they haven't any homes and there isn't any place to wash in the shelters. So they wash in the frosty morning in the dirty water of the great river that flows through the heart of the great metropolis of London.

Some of the lucky ones have a friend near-by who hasn't been bombed out, possibly a little Cockney cottage tailor with a musty crowded shop and living quarters in the rear. The lucky ones go to their friends' places and wash there.

The second hour to see the down-and-outers is 3 o'clock in the afternoon as darkness starts to close in and they queue up for another night in the shelter. The down-and-outers don't complain much about this. Communist agitators have tried to work among them but they haven't made much headway. Possibly that

TREE FRUITS VOTE CALLED

Growers Of Bartletts, Plums, Elbertas Ballot On Federal Agreement

SAN FRANCISCO. — A referendum among growers of three deciduous fruits produced in California on continuation or termination of the amended Federal marketing agreement and order as it applies to each of these fruits, will be conducted by February 1, 1941, the Surplus Marketing Administration of the United States Department of Agriculture announced today.

Studd and Harry Cleaver, SMA field representative at Sacramento, have been designated by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard as agents to conduct the referendum.

Pointing out that only ballots received by the Surplus Marketing Administration postmarked on or before midnight of February 1 would be recorded, Studd stated that qualified growers who, for any reason, did not receive ballots by mail may obtain and cast ballots at the offices of their local County Agricultural Conservation Committee (489

JACK BERRY IS NAMED 2ND LIEUTENANT IN COMPANY D

Jack Berry, of Camino, has been commissioned a Second Lieutenant in Company D, 115th Engineers, California National Guard.

Confirmation of the appointment was received Friday morning by First Lieutenant Fred Schumacher, who is in charge of the organization of Company D.

First Lieut. Schumacher said that Lieut. Berry will report in Placerville Monday morning to assist in completing organization of the company.

Lieut. Schumacher will be at the War Veterans' Memorial Building Saturday evening from seven o'clock until ten o'clock, and on Sunday afternoon from 2 o'clock until 5 o'clock and Sunday evening from seven o'clock until ten o'clock to discuss the opportunities for enlistment with men interested in joining Company D.

All men who have enrolled for the company and who have not yet taken their medical examination should report at the War Veterans' Memorial Building Monday night at seven o'clock, the Lieutenant said.

(EDITORIAL)

Guard Company In Balance

At a meeting Friday of the civic committee sponsoring the formation in El Dorado County of Company D, 115th Engineers, California National Guard, the officers explained bluntly that unless a greater interest is demonstrated in getting the company organized, it is within the realm of probability that authorization for the company will be withdrawn and it will be formed in some other community of the state.

This means the loss of the community's chances to acquire a National Guard Armory, representing the loss of an expenditure of several thousands of dollars in state funds.

To business men of the community, it means the loss of an annual pay-roll estimated at $8,000 which will flow into the community when the unit is based in Placerville.

It would appear that it is high time that the People of the community are interesting themselves in seeing to it that the organization of Company D proceeds with dispatch. First Lieut. Fred Schumacher with the assistance of Lieut. Mackay have been doing all in their power to complete the organization, but they need help.

Business men and others whose duty it should be to see that the organization of this company is completed can point out to eligible men the opportunities which enlistment in Company D affords.

In the first place it is a "home" organization. The men will be among their chums and acquaintances.

Secondly, it is a specialized organization in which men who enlist now will have opportunity to qualify for special pay in addition to the base pay.

Thirdly, to men of Selective Service age, it represents an opportunity for them to discharge their obligation under the Selective Service Act by putting in one year of field training and two additional years of one night of drill per week. Then they are through.

Contrasted to this, men who are drafted are on reserve call for ten years.

The young men of El Dorado County are interested in this organization. All they require is to be informed of the opportunities which enlistment in Company D affords.

Let US get behind this community and national project and put it "over the top," and promptly!

SEC. STIMSON RECALLED IN AID STUDY

President Declares Bill Is Designed Solely To Protect America

WASHINGTON, (UP) — President Roosevelt declared today that many provisions in the British aid bill are designed solely to protect America in a world situation that is shifting every 24 hours. He indicated he has no disposition to reverse any of those sections.

As for conjectures that certain provisions might enable him to purchase Britain's fleet in the event England falls to the Nazis, he said that was "cow jumped over the moon" speculation.

Mr. Roosevelt was asked whether he would object to removing from the bill the section which permits the United States to buy equipment from governments which it considers friendly. He replied quickly that in a world that changes every 24 hours, the administration might need something quickly and urgently to add to American defense. The provision is strictly a precautionary measure, he said.

The bill has no provision prohibiting him from standing on his head, he said, and despite this fact the President of the United States has no intention of standing on his head.

Opponents of the bill were confident that Joseph P. Kennedy, retiring ambassador to Great Britain, would oppose it in a nationwide radio speech Saturday night.

They admitted that their expectations were based mostly on hope, but after Kennedy visited Mr. Roosevelt yesterday, he conferred with Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, D., Mont.

A lively interest is reported by Secretary Wallace M. Ripley in the annual membership dinner of the Chamber of Commerce, to be held Monday night at Hotel Raffles, and reservations Friday morning were reported running fifty per cent in excess of those of last year.

The dinner meeting will be the occasion for the annual installation of officers, and is open to all members of the chamber with their ladies, and to any other civic spirited citizens who desire to attend.

Roy Strum will succeed Swift Berry as president of the organization and the guest speaker for the dinner will be Dr. R. E. Rutledge, president of the Sacramento Junior College.

BIRTHDAY BALL AND OTHER "FIGHT PARALYSIS" EVENTS MAPPED

The committee of El Dorado County Chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis met Thursday evening at dinner at Hotel Raffles to outline the various events in the "Fight Infantile Paralysis" campaign in the county this year.

In addition to the birthday ball, to be held at the I. O. O. F. hall on February 1, the committee announces a whist party that same evening in the third floor lodge room of the hall. This will afford opportunity for those who do not care to dance to help support the campaign and at the same time participate in one of its activities.

In addition, "March of Dimes" buttons will be sold throughout the county and "Wishing Wells" also will be established. Schools of the county are planning to co-operate in the campaign.

Those who attended the meeting included Chairman Robert Reeder, Miss Marcella Ward, Mrs. Norma Humphrey, Mrs. James Merryman, Arthur Mart, Carl B. Davis, William Allison and Paul La Brie.

The Slighted Invitation

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON 1-78

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Jan. 19 is Luke 14:15-24. The Golden Text being Luke 14:17, "Come; for all things are now ready.")

THE SCENE of the lesson today is the same as in last week's lesson, somewhere in Perea, the province of Palestine, opposite Judea, on the eastern side of the river Jordan. The time was January, A. D. 30.

Jesus was dining with a Pharisee and his friends, and He had just finished telling them that the type of guest they should invite to their feasts was the poor, the maimed, the lame and the blind, because they would not be able to return the favor. In other words, the host would not be trying to gain benefits from such guests.

As our Lord finished this speech, a man near Him said: "Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God." This man thought, doubtless, that the talk was getting a little out of hand. He was afraid Jesus would say something to offend, and he tried to change the conversation. Jesus answered him by telling another parable. A certain man made a great supper and asked many people to it. When all was ready he sent his servant to those invited, saying, "Come, for all things are now ready."

Instead of hurrying to the feast, the real friends would, rejoicing at the chance to eat the good food and have a happy time, each one made some flimsy excuse. One said he had bought a field and must go to look at it. Another announced that he had bought some oxen and must try them. And still another explained that he had just been married and could not leave his home.

Naturally the host was very hurt and angry. "Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city," he said to his servant, "and bring in hither the poor, the maimed, and the halt, and the blind."

Still Not Enough
The servant did as his lord bade, and came to him again to say he had done so, but there were still not enough. "Go into the highways and hedges," he answered, "and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled. For I say unto you, that none of these men that were bidden shall taste of my supper."

The refusal of these men to come to the supper of the man who had invited them was an insult, for none of the excuses given were important enough to keep them away if they had wanted to come. The moral of the story is that we, too, make many excuses to stay away when we are invited to partake of the Lord's bounty. The things we are doing may seem of large importance to us at the time; but are they, when we consider what it means to us to be forever kept away from His hospitality?

Next Jesus reminded those that followed Him that in order to be a true disciple, it was necessary for a man to leave all his kith and kin—even to hate them if they would hinder him in his mission—and to "bear his cross and come after Me." He must not value even his own life if it interfered with the service of the Master.

Giving His reasons for this, Jesus says:

"For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it? Lest haply, after he hath laid the foundation, and is not able to finish it, all that behold it begin to mock him."

Asks for Peace
"Or what king, going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to fight against him with twenty thousand? Or else, while the other is yet a great way off, he sendeth an ambassador, and desireth conditions of peace."

There must be no distractions when a disciple "takes up his cross" to follow Jesus and teach His message.

"So, likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple."

"Salt is good; but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be seasoned?"

"It is neither fit for the land, nor yet for the dunghill; but men cast it out. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

"Come; for all things are now ready," our Golden Text says. The world so badly needs the message of brotherhood and good will our Lord preached. We must not give excuses nor hesitate to follow Him at once and do those things He asks of us.

He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son" (Revelation 21:6-7). Bible selections will include the following passages from John 8: 31, 51, 58: "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed;—Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death.—Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, I am."

A passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included, which reads as follows: "If man did not exist before the material organization began, he could not exist after the body is disintegrated. If we live after death and are immortal, we must have lived before birth, for if life ever had any beginning, it must also have an ending, even according to the calculations of natural science" (p. 429).

hundred level of the Church Mine is said to have bared a large ledge which will yield values of from $300 to $1,500 per ton. Some ore is being milled at the Lookout mill, under lease.

The Independence mine is down to the 1,200 level, with a 200-foot winze.

It will be of interest to mining men generally to know that the new development at the Church and Independence mines is due almost entirely to Mr. Loring, who has a record of many years of successful operation in mining.

At one time an associate of former President Herbert Hoover in the mining business, Mr. Loring is a former owner of the Carson Hill mine and of the Plymouth mine in Amador County, both of which have rich production records.

Mr. Loring's prominence in the mining industry resulted in his election as a president of the American Mining Congress a number of years ago. His association with former President Hoover was in 1902 in Australia when Mr. Loring became superintendent of a group of mines Mr. Hoover was operating, and subsequently purchased Mr. Hoover's interests.

"NORTHWEST MOUNTED POLICE" OPENS 3-DAY PLACERVILLE SHOWING ON SUNDAY AT EMPIRE THEATER

Two great love stories, and a thousand thrills—a thousand at the very least!—mark the new Cecil B. DeMille epic film, "Northwest Mounted Police," which Paramount will present on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the Empire Theater, with Gary Cooper and Madeline Carroll starred, and Pauline Goddard, Preston Foster, Robert Preston, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman, George Bancroft, Lon Chaney, Jr., and Walter Hampden rounding out a list of the starring players.

Manager Otto Schmit announces that owing to the great interest in the picture, the Sunday schedule will include four shows, with the doors of the theatre opening Sunday at noon. The first showing will start at 12:45 o'clock.

The most important of the love stories happens to be a triangular affair, one in which Gary Cooper, cast as Dusty Rivers, a Texas Ranger, and Preston Foster, playing Bret, Sergeant of the Mounted Police, both become romantically persuaded of the loveliness of Miss Madeline Carroll, seen here as April Logan, a charming nurse at a settlement in the Canadian northwest, called Batoche. The lovely story of these three goes forward under exciting circumstances as the Mounted attempt to put down the revolt of thousands of Metis, a half-breed people. Although many may be anxious to know, it would hardly be fair to tell who wins the lovely Miss Carroll in this instance.

The other story, hardly less important, concerns Robert Preston, who holds down the role of Ronnie Logan, one of the Mounted and Paulette Goddard, who has one of the best roles she has ever played, that of Louvette, an Indian girl about as tame as a wildcat when it comes to matters of the heart. In short, she's out to make Ronnie hers, and she does for a time, even though she has to make him her personal prisoner, thereby making it possible for thousands of half-breed Metis to ambush and cut down a troop of the red-coated Mounted.

Motivation for the main plot of the story has its basis in actual fact: in 1885, the Metis rebelled against the Canadian government. DeMille has built the rebellion into a story which finds the leading members of the east, when they are not concerned with romance, trying to save the Mounted from being destroyed by the half-breeds, fighting back gallantly against almost insuperable odds.

Filmed on an epic scale from any standpoint that one might consider, "Northwest Mounted Police" looms as DeMille's greatest picture, possessing a huge starring cast, romance, action, thrill after thrill—everything moviegoers might want, including Technicolor to lend reality to the vivid scenic backgrounds.

Here is a real boy. Yet he is no more than typical of the boys whom this newspaper is proud to have represent it as its Newspaper boys. They are getting all the pleasures that boyhood affords and at the same time they are preparing themselves for the responsibilities of manhood.

Their NEWSPAPER BOY activities, especially designed for boys of school age, contribute more than a small part in developing the traits that are so essential to success later in life.

Newspaper Boys are better boys. They make better men.

is because the down-and-outers are Londoners and British to the core.

You've probably read about one big shelter where three or four thousand of these people spend 16 hours out of each 24. This shelter is something of a sight in London, like the Bowery used to be in New York or West Madison Street in Chicago. Visiting journalists asked to see it and send home descriptions and impressions.

This shelter is a big freight depot, all heavy stonework and cobbled floors—something built in London in the massive days of the Soames Forsyte era. Much of the building still is used for freight. But the vast, damp gloom of the ground floor is now a "shelter."

It's safe. That's about all that you can say for it although it's true that within the limitations of the sometimes stifling British red-tape efforts at improvements are under way.

Roy Strum, whom I hope won't find himself too busy with his new duties as chief chamber of commerce mogul to play a few rounds of golf, apparently is a believer of "don't make any difference what's say but just keep saying something." Last night while engaged in a friendly encounter over the elbow-bending counter, I became interested in a device which the bartender assured me was a brand new yes-yes board he recently acquired from Monsieur Oulja. After several spiritual passes I got the green light which meant a message was coming. As near as could be interpreted the board spoke that someone whose vibrant rays of light, heat and power reached out to scores, to hundreds, to thousands, would like to know how to keep his name before the public. Who could that be but Roy Strum? Well, one way, Roy, would be to take yourself a duck in Lake Hearn. (Any similarity to "go jump in the lake" is purely coincidental.)

end. They are spaced a foot or so apart. They also are putting running water and, eventually, they may get around to better toilets than the buckets now provided.

You can smell this shelter when you get close to it in the blackout of the night. That is, you literally can smell it. The fetid air comes out of the doorway like stale air comes up the subway grills in New York. But the subway exhaust is fresh beside that of the warehouse shelter.

If you go down into the shelter you can see the sleeping thousands. Some of them sleep in the big white-washed bays, two or three feet off the floor where freight used to be piled. But many are on the cobbles floor. The cobbles are often damp and they put two or three layers of newspapers under them and a blanket, if they have one.

Inside the shelter there is another odor—that of strong disinfectant that clings to the walls, the heavy wooden platforms and the dust. Three times a day the shelter is drenched in disinfectant—in the morning when the down-and-outers leave, in the afternoon before they come in and about midnight when they are sleeping. There's a canteen in the shelter, run by the Salvation Army. It runs all night, selling tea and cakes, ham or sausage, cold meat pies for a penny or two. Some people bring their own teapots and cups. Some are families, mother, father, children and dog. Many are without families.

Between 8 in the morning and 3 in the afternoon when the lines start to form at the shelter doors these people wander the streets. They get simple meals at communal feeding centers. Or if they have money they buy the East End equivalent of American hamburgers and hot dogs—"fish and chips."

Most of these down-and-outers have no jobs. Some of their jobs were bombed out of existence in the great attacks and fires which swept the East End docks and warehouses in September. But many of them lost their jobs before that.

ARTIST SKETCHING MOTHER LODE HAS STUDIO AT COLOMA

Othello Weston, artist, is doing something that has needed doing a long time, says a Sacramento paper. She is preserving in book form, sketches of historic buildings in the Mother Lode, and is making copies available to the public.

Both her compilation of the books and her method of sale are unique and effective. She has tried marketing her sketches to publishers who shied away because of the expense of reproduction and what they believed a limited field.

So Mrs. Weston, who presided at the information desk in the newspaper office at Sutter's Fort during the centennial celebration, has made good stencils of 182 drawings with typed information concerning each and is mimeographing the books on craft paper. The edition will be limited to 500 copies.

She has made heavy loose-leaf covers for the books and is putting the edition out on the installment plan—the covers and 18 pages of the book go out as the first installment, later insertions twice a month until completed.

This method permits Mrs. Weston to gain some income from the sale of the books while she is working and keeps up the interest of the readers. She is doing the work in her studio in Coloma.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett M. Grossman, of Georgetown, are the parents of a daughter, Ethel Mae, born January 9th at Placerville Sanatorium.

Main Street in Placerville). These offices will remain open as polling places from 8:00 a. m. to 5:00 p. m. on January 27 and 28, Studd said.

The marketing agreement program for handling of Bartlett pears, plums and Elberta peaches in interstate and foreign commerce, became operative May 29, 1939 and was amended July 17, 1940. Developed by the industry to improve marketing conditions, the amended program is similar to the marketing plan which was in effect for these fruits in 1936 and 1937.

The California Deciduous Tree Fruit Program requires that a referendum be held before February 1, 1941, and each second year following, to determine whether continuation of the program is desired by producers of each of the fruits concerned for the fruits they represent. The Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, under which the program was developed, requires also that the Secretary of Agriculture terminate any marketing agreement or order if termination is favored by a majority of producers who produce collectively more than 50 per cent of the commodity concerned.

Applicable to all areas in California where Bartlett pears, plums and Elberta peaches are produced, the program, if continued, would provide for: The establishment of a control committee of 25 members to administer the program; establishment of separate commodity committees of growers to administer shipping regulation provisions concerning each fruit; limitation of leader of the congressional opposition.

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson described as "fantastic and preposterous," reports that the United States might allow British warships to operate from our ports, or might buy the Royal Navy if Britain falls.

"I never heard of such a suggestion," Stimson told the house foreign affairs committee as he resumed his testimony in support of the embattled aid-to-Britain bill. He was asked about the report by Rep. George Holden Tinkham, R., Mass., a non-interventionist leader.

"Do you consider that it could be done?" Tinkham asked.

"I consider that a fantastic and preposterous suggestion, like the suggestion that the President might give away the navy," Stimson replied.

The proposed bill would open American ports and outlying bases for the repair and outfitting of British warships, but Stimson said this does not mean the war vessels could shipment of any grade or size of fruit; federal - state inspection of all shipments during periods when shipping regulations are in effect; regulation of daily shipments; operation of a clearing house of marketing information concerning these fruits; authority for regulation of unfair trade practices in packing Elberta peaches; and means of financing the program. Amendments adopted to clarify and make 1939-40 program more efficient also would be continued.

Stimson was recalled for further questioning after he had testified for two hours yesterday. He warned then of air invasion perils facing the United States if the British fleet is destroyed or surrenders. He was to be followed later today by Secretary of Navy Frank Knox.
